Polar Problems

Global warming is melting the poles and causing problems for arctic inhabitants.

The north and south poles of the world are melting, which is home to many animal species including polar bears and penguins. CReSIS (Center for the Remote Sensing of Ice Sheets) is a team of scientists investigating how to slow the ice caps from melting and to help save our arctic friend's homes from disappearing.

CReSIS www.cresis.ku.edu